1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1) as $\epsilon \rightarrow 0$. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1) converge to the solutions of the system (2) in the sense of the L^2 -norm.

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand the preferences and behaviors of potential customers. Once a need is identified, the next step is to develop a concept that addresses this need. This concept should be unique and offer a clear value proposition to the target market.

2. After developing a concept, the next step is to create a prototype. This is a physical or digital representation of the product that allows the team to test and refine the design. Prototyping is crucial for identifying potential issues early in the process and making necessary adjustments before full-scale production.

3. Once a prototype is ready, the next step is to conduct a pilot test. This involves releasing a limited quantity of the product to a small group of customers. The purpose of the pilot test is to gather feedback on the product's performance, usability, and overall appeal. This feedback is used to make final adjustments to the product design and production process.

4. After the pilot test, the next step is to launch the product into the market. This involves a marketing campaign to create awareness and drive sales. The launch should be supported by a distribution strategy that ensures the product is available to the target audience in a timely and efficient manner.

5. Finally, the last step in the process is to monitor the product's performance in the market. This involves tracking sales, customer feedback, and market trends. Continuous monitoring allows the company to make data-driven decisions about future product improvements and marketing strategies.
